Washington State Legal History Reflected in Art

Justice Gerry Alexander (retired), Washington State Supreme Court

Washington Courts Historical Society

The Washington Courts Historical Society was formed to preserve Washington State's rich and varied legal history. with the original idea stemming from Supreme Court Justices Gerry Alexander and Philip Talmadge, with the support of then Chief Justice Barbara Durham.

The goal of this group is to preserve the rich historical heritage of all levels of the Washington Court System as well as of the Bar Association. It accomplishes this through the collection, preservation, and dissemination of written and oral history, significant artifacts, memorabilia and information related to the court and the legal profession of the State of Washington.

This biennial continuing legal education program supports the mission of the Washington Courts Historical Society and helps us continue our mission to preserving Washington's rich legal history. We appreciate your support.
